WHEELING, W. VA., JUNE 1, 1887.

Teader. Vincent A. Taylor offers some Rapublican party towards the men who truth of statement and wisdom of infer this much of it ought to be printed in every Republican newspaper:

There is no encouragement for any one to do work in the Kepublican party in Ouyahoga county. It has come to pass that every man who takes a part in political; work, no matter how little or how much, becomes a bose. And no matter what his life may be, he is regarded with suspicion, and is almost as surely barred from holding office as if he had taken up his abode in some one of the Southern States. me out to the caucuses, and read rder to purify politics, the peone out and save the party from le men in their own ranks that they take ap the Democratic business men put in ination to catch their votes, and when they elect them and find it is the same nocratic party they have helped to elect, they vow they won't do it again, but the next time that terrible ghost "bossism" appears to them, away they go. In the field of national politics the Democratic newspapers began, when the Republican party was in power, to break down its strongest men. When nothing else could be said against a Republican who made it part of the business of his life to look well to the party organization, he was denounced as a "boss." Republicans heard so much of this from the Democratic side that they began to believe it. From that moment the Republican party was under disabilities as a fighting force. was under disabilities as a fighting force.

Men who had gone to the front because of their capacity stepped to the rear rather again become the creditor nation, but their capacity stepped to the rear rather than be targets for abuse, and others were forced to the rear. It was a great chance for mediocrity, but the party suffered.

To-day Republicans who fight in the ranks realize the mistake. They are enrolling themselves in clubs and seeking leadership as means of reconstructing the impaired organization. They are less disposed than ever before to permit Democratic newspapers and Mugwump allies to tell them whom they shall trust and whom they shall follow. Reaction has come, and already the Republican organization shows

Cheap Editions of Good Books

Some one discovers and tells with great glee that the American houses that have embarked in the publication of cheap editions of foreign books are far from reaping a harvest; that, in fact, some of them ing a harvest; that, in fact, some of them South streets railroad conductors drew are on their last legs by reason of their $15,000 in the Louisiana State Lottery, but unprofitable piracies. They have overstocked the market, and unless some of them make haste to go under, they will all be in a bad box. Taking the cue from this untoward state of attairs, we are treated to the old suggestion, that after the cheap things are no more people will return to the good old practice of buying good books published by good houses using good paper and clothing their wares using good paper and clothing their wares in presentable garb.

If the "pirates" have overdone the Times.

thing, that was a mistake of business judgment which, as it seems, is already correcting itself. There may be a weeding out of publishers, but we may be sure that the business of supplying the public with cheap editions of good and popular books, has only fairly begun. The demand grows, and there will be publishers enough

This demand does not necessarily imply a deprayed tasto, Cheap editions of standard works are bought by men and women who desire to read them as they travel, and for other sufficient reasons, and do not wish to run the risk of loging or defacing expensive volumes. Often they are bought by persons who have in their libraries suparb editions of the same books-so superb that they are held beyond every-day use. The best of the cher p editions are bought, also, to have bourd inexpensively according to individual

It is not to be denied that the cheap editions have placed in the hands of the people the very best literature by bringing it within their reach. The proportion of literary trash diminishes set the taste for the standard writers grows, and this taste is cultivated as the heat is brought down in price. All this may be hard on the authors and publishers whose work are "pirated," but since the works of American authors are pirated without mercy abroad, we really are unable to see that the American reader in under any moral obligation to abstain from buying his book in the cheapest form that suits him Furthermore, since the best paper, printing and binding are not infrequently be stowed upon "pirated" editions put forth by eminent houses, the moral criticism does not strike especially the cheap edi-Fit cases. ing of paupers on American soil. The Scandinavian made fast to Christian street wharf early yesterday morning, and the 600 other emigrant on board were able to pase a satisfactory examination, and were allowed to land and processed on their journey. The passage of those detained was paid by the English Government. All were poor, not being able to show over $20 in possession of the entire party, and none would give satisfactory assurance that they would not become public charges. They were tickeded to points in the West, none of them having friends in Philadelphis, but all claiming to have relatives awaiting their arrival.

All the families were from the vicinity of Westport, a small scaport on the western coast of Ireland, in the county Mayo. The men were farmers and had worked small tracts of land owned by William Pike, of the Parish of Ackel; Sir George O'Donnell, of Newport; James Victor Kennedy and James Palmer, of Brizool. They had recently been evicted through inability to pay rent, and while they remained on the Green Isle were forced to live with neighbors. The men say that some months ago they were approached by a stranger who represented himself as an agent of the English Government, and who offered to pay their passage to any city in America if they could get a letter from relatives or friends asking them to come. This they immediately set about accomplishing, and when the Scandinavian called at Galway, men, women and children to the number of eighty-four were ready to be shipped to this country. They had secured the letters and given them to the agent, who paid their passage. These letters, which were evidence that the families had triesds in America to receive them, and could not be considered as pappers, were retained on the others side.

The migrants were lounging about the deck of the steamer vesteriay and were weather and were ready to be shipped to the considered as pappers, were retained on the others side.

The emigrants were lounging about the deck of the steamer yesterday and were indignant at not being permitted to proceed to their destinations. They were ill caid and showed in their looks the poverty they had been forced to endure. The stories they tell of hardships the didiculty experienced in securing enough money to pay rent, and their final eviction from the miserable hovels that had given many of them sholter since birth were pitting to little the total their condition willingly, and attributed it to the cupidity and neglect of the land-lords.

seven years at the trade, but could no longer get work."

Con Shields, a tottering old man of 80 years, tells a pitiful story of how himself, wife and eight soldiers were evicted by two hundred children, constabulary and police. He praised the work of the Irish National League, which, he said, compels Asinona League, which, he said, compel-neighbors to give shelter to evicted ten ants, reimbursing them for their service. The matter has been referred to the Board of Immigration Commissioners who will visit the steamer to-day and de-cide whether the research and the cide whether the people shall be returne to Ireland by the Scandinavian.

The value of our imports from Canad last year was $37,314,636, of which $12,005, 553 were duty free; the value of our ex-ports was $44,855,039, of which $15,198,16-were duty free. At the close of the reci-procity years we had a balance in our favo-of more than $95,000,000. Upon the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty the ba ance turned in favor of the Dominion, th whether as largely as we should have been with reciprocity is more than doub ful.

The Quaker City has several times shown the falsity that "lightning neves strikes twice in the same place." Not long ago a combination of Lombard and South streets relicional conductors along the drawing on Tuesday, April 12th, has proven a still greater windfall in one-tenth of the $150,000 capital prize, to a combinaof the $100,000 capital prize, to a combina-tion of thirteen men, employed by the firm of Goodell & Waters, machinery manufacturers, Hamilton, above Fifteenth streets.
